For AD Interior 2013, Bernard Pictet creates a low table with a figure of a gisant, to a design by Agence Malherbe

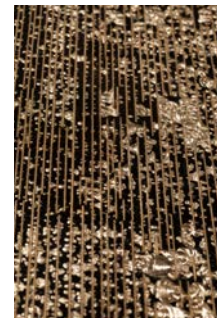

Taking metamorphosis, the theme of the latest AD Interior exhibition, as its inspiration, Agence Malherbe creative design agency took the bold step of imagining an "Ex-voto" low table suggesting the spectre of a gisant or recumbent figure.

The agency, which works regularly with the studio, asked Bernard Pictet to bring this idea into being.

It began by selecting two samples of the studio's work that were especially suited to this project: a large chiselled motif and a small chiselled motif with gilding on a black background.

Working from photographs of these two samples, the agency then produced a precise computer-generated image of the figure.

The studio reproduced this image as closely as possible before making the final adjustments requested by Hubert de Malherbe.
