« The finished piece must appear natural, in its element. The ease with which it is created confers its gracefulness and elegance. » BERNARD PICTET

« Glass fascinates with its transparency, clarity and purity. It plays with light in endless ways, allowing it to penetrate, becoming translucent or opalescent (...). Silver transforms glass into mirror (...). Screenprinting covers it with films and patterns. Sand sculpts glass. Acid frosts it. The chisel indents it (...). Some are striving to reintroduce the tiny and now rarely seen imperfections of inclusions, bubbles and splinters, drawing inspiration from the aesthetic perfection of rock crystal. Thus the beauty of glass is revealed in terms of material and texture... »
